

ASTRAL DEEP REPORT

Your Natal Birth Chart

A Personalized Cosmic Portrait

Jane Doe

1992-07-14 · 09:30 · America/Los_Angeles

Rising: Virgo | Sun: Cancer | Moon: Capricorn

Generated July 08, 2026

Table of Contents

INTRO	Your Natal Chart Wheel	3
DATA	Planet Positions & Houses	4
CHAPTER 1	Overview & Your Cosmic Signature	5
CHAPTER 2	Your Inner World	6
CHAPTER 3	Love & Relationships	7
CHAPTER 4	Career & Calling	8
CHAPTER 5	Strengths & Blind Spots	9
CHAPTER 6	Your Elemental Balance	10
CHAPTER 7	Growing Forward	11
CLOSING	Disclaimer & About This Report	12

Overview & Your Cosmic Signature

You were born under a full moon — and that single fact organizes almost everything else in your chart. Your Sun rests in Cancer in the eleventh house at 22 degrees, while your Moon stands directly across the sky in Capricorn in the fifth, the two luminaries facing each other in a near-exact opposition. Add your Virgo Ascendant, rising at 6 degrees, and you have your cosmic signature: a person built around a living dialogue between belonging and self-possession, softness and structure, the group and the singular creative self.*

Your Cancer Sun in the eleventh house places the heart of your identity in the world of friendship, community, and shared futures. Cancer is the sign of care, memory, and emotional intelligence; the eleventh is the house of networks, allies, and collective hopes. Together they suggest a tendency to come alive when you are tending something communal — a circle of friends, a team, a cause — and to express your warmth not in grand declarations but in the quiet logistics of making people feel included. You tend to remember what others forget: the birthday, the hard week someone mentioned in passing, the thread of a dream a friend confided months ago.

Yet your Capricorn Moon in the fifth house pulls in the opposite direction, and this is the productive tension at your core. The fifth house governs creativity, pleasure, romance, and self-expression; Capricorn approaches all of it with seriousness, patience, and a craftsman's standards. Your emotional life does not drift — it builds. You tend to feel most secure when your joy has a form: a project, a discipline, a body of work. Where your Sun wants to belong to the many, your Moon wants to author something that is unmistakably yours. The full-moon opposition between them, exact to just over one degree, means you may often feel these pulls simultaneously — the invitation of the group and the call of the private studio — and your life keeps asking you to honor both rather than choose one forever.

Your Virgo Ascendant is the lens that gathers this polarity into a single, coherent presence. Rising Virgo gives you an observant, precise, quietly helpful exterior — the person who notices what is off by a few degrees, who improves things almost reflexively, who shows care through usefulness. With Jupiter also sitting in Virgo in your first house, that helpfulness carries unusual warmth and luck: people tend to trust you on sight, sensing that your attention to detail is really a form of devotion.

There is a pattern worth naming here. Cancer feels, Capricorn builds, Virgo refines. All three are signs that serve something larger than mood: family, legacy, craft. Your signature is not that of a person chasing attention, but of one who earns significance by taking care — of people, of standards, of the work itself. The invitation of this chart is to let the two ends of your full-moon axis feed each other: to bring your community into your creative ambitions, and to bring your disciplined artistry back to the people who feel like home.

When the balance tips too far, you may notice the signs — over-giving to the group until your own work starves, or retreating into flawless private effort until you feel unseen. Neither is a flaw; each is simply the axis asking for its counterweight.

To understand how this signature actually feels from the inside — the emotional needs beneath the competence, and the quick, proud mind that few people fully see — we turn now to your inner world.

Love & Relationships

*Y*our Venus sits in Leo in the eleventh house, at the very first degree of the sign — and a Venus at zero degrees Leo loves the way a curtain rises: wholeheartedly, warmly, with an unmistakable sense of occasion. You find beauty in loyalty that is proud of itself, in affection that is not embarrassed to be seen. Placed in the eleventh house, your Venus tends to find love inside friendship: the slow-burn story where the person who makes you laugh at the group dinner gradually becomes the person you cannot stop thinking about. You attract through generosity and radiance, and you are most magnetic in community — hosting, celebrating, championing your people.

The pattern that comes with this placement is worth naming gently: eleventh-house Venus can blur the line between being adored and being known. Applause is lovely, but your Leo Venus is actually hungry for something rarer — a witness. Someone who claps not for the performance but for the person backstage. The invitation is to let a few people past the warmth and into the workshop.

Your Mars tells a different, steadier story. Mars in Taurus in the ninth house desires slowly, thoroughly, and with remarkable patience. In attraction, you are not the chaser of novelty; you are the one who decides, quietly and bodily, and then simply keeps showing up. The ninth house adds a crucial requirement: desire, for you, is entangled with meaning. You are drawn to people who expand your world — who bring a philosophy, a culture, a horizon you have not seen. A partner who cannot travel with you, literally or intellectually, will eventually feel like a closed door.

Venus in fire and Mars in earth make an interesting pair even without a direct aspect between them: your heart wants celebration while your body wants certainty. The relationships that satisfy you tend to offer both — festivity and reliability, romance and routine. One without the other leaves you restless or bored, and knowing this about yourself is half the art.

Your Moon's exact trine to Mars — the tightest aspect in your chart, at barely a third of a degree — is a genuine gift in love. It means your instincts and your actions cooperate: when you feel something, you can do something about it, gracefully. You are capable of steady, unforced pursuit and of receiving affection without games. But Mars also opposes Pluto across your ninth and third houses, and squares Saturn more widely. Here lives the intensity: a tendency to hold on very hard to what you want, to test bonds under pressure, and occasionally to turn a difference of belief into a quiet power struggle. The gift inside that shadow is devotion with a spine — you do not abandon people. The invitation is to loosen the grip just enough to let the other person choose you freely, again and again.

Your seventh house of partnership carries Pisces on its cusp, with no planets inside — the space is open, and the sign is telling. You tend to draw partners with a dreamy, empathic, sometimes unmoored quality: artists, feelers, wanderers who soften your Capricorn-Moon edges. At best, they teach you that love does not have to be earned through competence. The pattern to watch is rescuing — falling for potential rather than the person in front of you, then over-functioning for two. Boundaries, for you, are not the opposite of romance; they are what make your romance sustainable.

Loved well, you are loyal, festive, sensual, and surprisingly playful — the partner who plans the trip, remembers the anniversary, and still wants to be surprised. The same devotion that shapes your closest bonds also shapes what you build in the world — and your chart has strong opinions about where that building wants to happen. Which brings us to your career and calling.

You've just read 2 of the 7 chapters in the full reading

The complete Deep Natal Report continues with:

- Your Inner World — how you feel and think (Moon & Mercury)
- Career & Calling — your Midheaven, Saturn & Jupiter
- Strengths & Blind Spots — your tightest aspects, exact orbs
- Your Elemental Balance
- Growing Forward — your North Node direction
- ...plus your full chart wheel and complete placement tables

20+ pages, calculated from your exact birth details.

Find "The Deep Natal Report" in our store to get yours.

ASTRAL ATELIER